ABSTRACT

A method for compressing a message is described comprising: identifying a first field and a second field within the message; applying a first set of code words to encode data in the first field; and applying a second set of code words to encore data in the second field.